Join colleagues for an evening dedicated to the remarkable life and career of William Augustus Hinton at the newly renovated and re-designed Public Health Museum. William A. Hinton was one of the preeminent microbiologists and immunologists of the Twentieth Century.

Graduate of, and faculty member at, Harvard Medical School, Dr. Hinton served the Massachusetts Department of Public Health for 38 years as director of the Wassermann Laboratory, where he invented the improved test for syphilis named after him. His contributions to public health, syphilology and laboratory practice were many, including the founding one of the first schools for the training of medical technologists in 1929. You will hear about his career and contributions, the challenge presented by syphilis in the first half of the Twentieth Century and his remarkable family, and also have the opportunity of a first look at the re-designed Public Health Museum.

The Northeast Branch, American Society for Microbiology cordially invites you to our fourth program in 2012. This is an opportunity to “keep-pace” with current issues in microbiology and to network with other professionals in the field. This continuing medical laboratory education activity is recognized by the American Society of Clinical Pathologists as meeting the criteria for 1 CMLE credit.
